POLITICAL NOTES.

—Col. Aleck McClure's "covenants" with the people of Philadelphia irresistibly remind one of the pledges of the Western candidate, who solemnly declared that if the Grangers would elect him he would never use anything but a curry-comb to get the hay seed out of his hair.

—Concerning the Louisiana question, on which a major portion of the Democratic press is still harping, it is a significant fact that not a single name has been presented to Congress from that State petitioning for a new election. Will the opposition explain the reason of this notable abstinence?

—The veteran General Harney, whose military experience among the Indians is probably greater than that of any man living, gives it as his opinion that if the Indians are honestly treated, and not plundered, they will live peaceably on their reservations, and he affirms that Indian outbreaks are generally made to avenge indignities offered them by agents, and hangers-on around their camps, who live by deceiving and robbing them—a plain, blunt statement, whose principle value consists in its strong flavor of truth.

—Congressman Vance, of North Carolina, has addressed a letter to the New York Herald complaining of misrepresentation on the part of the Washington correspondent of that paper. He asserverates that he has not, in Congress or elsewhere, "declared himself ready for another rebellion;" but that he said "distinctly and plainly," that "under the same circumstances we"—i. e. the Southern people—"would do so again." It is really too bad that so fine a casuist should be so grossly misapprehended. And now perhaps Mr. Vance will be kind enough to draw the exact line of distinction between tweedle-dum and tweedle-dee.

—They call their party in Philadelphia the Citizens' Centennial Constitution party, and of the three candidates on their ticket to represent the three C's, not one is from Philadelphia. McClure is from Franklin county, the candidate for City Solicitor is from Berks county, and the nominee for Receiver of Taxes is but lately from New York, which city he left hurriedly and without a certificate of character. A Philadelphia ticket without a Philadelphian on it is strange enough; but it is not stranger than a Reform ticket with out a Reformer on it or a democratic ticket with a renegade Republican at its head, or a ticket in the interest of honesty with a Confidence operator at its tail.

—The sapient legislators of New Jersey want Congress to assume the entire expense of arming and equipping the whole militia of the United States, upon the ground that the purchase of such arms and equipments imposes a great burden on the States themselves; forgetting—the simpletons—that even in such an event the money to foot the bill would eventually have to come out of the pockets of the people. No one wishes to deprive New Jersey of the privilege of playing soldier, to her heart's content— or of paying for the diversion afterwards. And then, what interest has a foreign State like New Jersey in the matter anyhow?

—The Democratic Legislature of Georgia would appear to be bent on smirching whatever of the good name of that State remains yet untarnished. It has just passed a bill to tax State railroad companies, although the State had previously made a solemn contract with these corporations, in which it agreed that upon condition the roads were built they should be exempt from taxation for a certain number of years. Upon the force of this agreement the railroads were constructed, and their bonds and stock have since passed into the hands of third parties. Now, the Legislature arbitrarily and illegally attempts to render this contract void. Of course there is no doubt that the courts will promptly pronounce this precious piece of legislation a nullity, but the fact that such a gross violation of the pledged faith of a great Commonwealth should even have been attempted, is none the less deserving of rebuke.

COMMISSIONER GRAMLY AND BROWN.

The last issue of Brown's Republican contained the following in regard to Samuel Gramly, the newly elected Republican Commissioner:

Our keeping the name of "J. G. Sankey up still," was but an oversight. We have no apology to make for it, however. One thing we do know that Samuel Foster, one of the Democratic Commissioners, published an affidavit that reflected somewhat upon the gentleman, you are pleased to call "Honest Samuel Gramly." We will publish a few facts, when we get ready, to show that a man, to be honest, must not wear two faces, and at no time violate his pledges, or make a liar of himself. Samuel Gramly may be an acquistion to the Republican party, but we cannot see it. We are sorry Sankey was beaten and our friends will all endorse us in this, when they hear the reasons. The friends of Brown's Republican nominated Samuel Gramly. We mean by this the people did it. He was nominated by delegates that the clique and its organ could not cotrol. But in Samuel Gramly honest earnest Republicans, we have "caught a tarter." Of this you will be convinced when we tell you what we know. Wait and see. To be fleeced by a Bellefonte clique, or a Court House Ring, what is the difference? The cod fish eaters say that Sankey was our, "first, last and only choice," but in this we will prove them in the language of Horace Greeley "base and contemptable liars"

The "Watchman" of the same week copies the above article with the following comments:

BROWN GOES BACK ON GRAMLY.—The strongest advocate of the election of Samuel Gramly to the Commissionership of Centre county, was Brown's Republican. It urged his claims in the most positive manner, and rallied the cohorts of republicanism to his support with bugle cries. He was then the best man in the county—the honestest man in the domain—the noblest roman of them all. But of late a change has come over the spirit of the dream. Gramly has been doing something. Evidently he has been going back on the friends through whose efforts and influence he was nominated, and Brown has gone back on him. To a charge made by the Tutens that he (Brown) still kept the name of J. G. Sankey in his official directory as Commissioner, he (Brown) thus replies in his paper of this week.

From these articles it is evident that some inferences may be drawn. Samuel Gramly since the time he was qualified as one of the three commissioners of the county, has performed his duties faithfully and well. No one denies this fact. The other two members of the board have repeatedly acknowledged his faithfulness and competency. There has been no room for fault finding or the Watchman, (which has never had aught to say against him since the election) would have given the public the full benefit of it. No honest man has ever called in question Samuel Gramly's integrity or honesty of purpose. But he has done something to call forth the above attack from Brown's Republican. Do the honest people of Centre county desire to know the reason of this shameful abuse? Samuel Gramly refused to allow the taxes of Centre county to be appropriated to the support of Brown's Republican. While J. G. Sankey was in office, Brown's Republican was kept alive because there was money in the county treasury. A make-believe republican paper lived mainly on the support it received from that source. J. G. Sankey was defeated and Samuel Gramly was elected to protect the people's money. Is it any wonder that Brown, who would sell out his best friend for five dollars, should attack him who thus cuts off his main source of sustenance? Does it not prove that which we asserted from the time of Mr. Gramly's nomination, that Brown's Republican and the Watchman were working hand in hand for the re-election of Sankey? During the campaign the facts of the case were plainly stated in this paper and the honest voters of the county contributed the merited rebuke to dishonesty and Samuel Gramley was elected. Is it any wonder that Brown should abuse him? He whose daily sustenance for years has depended on his success in black mailing and brow beating, cannot see the principal source of his income cut off, without a last desperate resort to his well plied art. But what is the result? Gramly wins the respect and confidence of his neighbors, and Brown shows his utter incompetency to "rule or ruin!" Who shall wonder that he is making every effort to sell out his paper and leave the county!

THE SUNDAY LAWS.—An earnest effort is being made to exempt the Seven Day Baptists and kindred religious persuasions from the penalty of 1798, imposed for working on Sunday, and the non performance of civil duties on Saturday. A meeting of Representatives from these denominations was held in the Hall of Representatives on Monday evening. The meeting was addressed by the Rev. S. H. Lewis. It is a question of considerable doubt whether this exemption will be made by the Legislature.

THE DEPOT QUESTION.

By reference to another column our readers will see a communication in reference to moving the Freight Depot connected with the Bald Eagle Valley R. R.

There seems to be considerable interest excited among those directly interested in the location of the depot, and quite an animated discussion is now going on through the papers, as well as by many of our citizens on the street.

By reference to a communication in the Watchman of last week, it will be seen that their correspondent endeavors to tomahawk us, because as he seems to intimate, we step between him and the tax-payers. He also intimates that we have an axe to grind of our own. We should be pleased to know what possible interest we have in the matter, more than we are interested alike with every tax payer to prevent any scheme (not absolutely necessary,) that has a tendency to increase our already enormous Borough debt. It looks to us as though the Watchman's correspondent had a tremendous big axe of his own to grind at the people's expense. It is fresh in the minds of many of our citizens no doubt that this same correspondent moved out of the borough a few years ago, to, as he said, escape paying Radical taxes. Now what does he propose to do? Why, simply to seduce the Rail Road officials into the removal of the freight depot to his Spring Township lands, not for the benefit of Bellefonte, its tax payers its merchants or its people, but for the express purpose of enhancing the value of his own property. After this shall have been accomplished he thinks the borough will of necessity be compelled to build a bridge across the creek opposite Griff Davis' at an expense of from eight to ten thousand dollars. This correspondent is the same individual who assisted in fleecing the county out of over seven hundred dollars (see Auditor's report) last year for the purpose of establishing a bogus republican paper, in order to divide the republican party. Just think of it tax payers, spending the people's money for his own private political schemes. But now as retrenchment and reform are working their way into the county affairs he turns his attention to another field of operations which if successful will require our borough tax payers to foot the bill. As to there not being room enough on the Depot siding for large trains, we can simply say that this only occurs when cars have been detained, or when the company fail to furnish cars to our shippers as they order them. We say to our tax payers be on your guard, for this wily schemer has been trained by Alec McClure.

INCREMANATION.

This is a term which signifies the process of burning dead bodies, and the subject has recently been attracting some attention in scientific circles, and considerable has been said in favor of this method of disposing of the remains of our dead. Our present practice of burying is sanctioned by ancient usage, but if it can be shown that this practice endangers the health of the living, its antiquity should be no protection to it. In densely populated districts it has been clearly demonstrated that burials have proved injurious to the health of the community. In very many of our cities, burials are made within the corporate limits, and but a small piece of land is allowed for burial purposes, and the consequence is that such localities breed miasma and become the seat of pestilences which often prove fearfully destructive of human life. In several localities in England the mortality tables have proved beyond a doubt the truth of the above proposition, and though our country is comparitively new, it may safely be stated that the same is true in a proportionate degree of all our city burial places. Interment of the dead has been practiced so long, that popular prejudice clings to it with the same tenacity that it does to other time honored institutions, and friends and relatives will view the matter in a light very different from that of scientific men. If a process could be invented by which a body could be reduced to ashes in a few minutes and the ashes placed in an urn, where they could be kept and preserved, it would be a much less repulsive method of disposing of the remains of our friends than that of burying them in the cold ground. When it is remembered that it is a sanitary question in which the well being and health of entire communities may be involved, these should outweigh all our prejudices and preconceived notions though they may have become crystalized even into our religious creeds.

IF MR. GLADSTONE expected to strengthen himself by an appeal to this country, he must be very much chagrined at his signal failure. Finding himself somewhat embarrassed by the strength and persistence of the opposition, he obtained a dissolution of Parliament and an order for a new election. The returns show large conservative gains, and it is now quite evident that his policy is not sustained by the country. Mr. Gladstone has been returned to Parliament, but there being a majority of members opposed to him, he will not be allowed to form a ministry. This duty will devolve upon his tory antagonist Disraeli, who will now have no excuse for not doing what he was urged to do when the Gladstone ministry was defeated on the Irish Educational bill. England has made more popular progress under the five years of Gladstone's ministry, than she made in any twenty years previous, and the success of the tories can be but temporary.

BENONI HOWARD a millionaire, has recently been convicted by a New York court, of having procured the engraving of a counterfeit revenue plate. On the first trial, which took place sometime last year, the jury failed to agree. The evidence which was wanting was the plate itself, but before the time for the second trial, this was found in a most singular manner. It seems that Howard had thrown the plate into the sea near Princess Bay, but an oyster-man brought it up with his rake. This discovery proved the ruin of Howard and all the ingenuity of his council, sharpened by the promise of large fees, could not shield him from punishment. The chances against the discovery of such a small piece of metal when thrown into the sea were infinitesimal, but it was found and became the means of incarcerating the quaker millionaire in a felon's cell.

LEGISLATIVE NEWS.

CASSVILLE ORPHAN'S SCHOOL.

The Legislature has appointed a sub-committee to investigate the charges of indecent and licentious conduct preferred against A. L. Guss, the late Superintendent of the Soldiers Orphans, School at Cassville. We understand that the Committee has gone to work, and it is thought that some at least, of the charges will be substantiated.

LOCAL OPTION.

A new license bill is on the boards and will be shortly introduced. It fixes the rates for obtaining licenses to sell liquor in hotels, as follows: where the sales amount to $10,000—$200, where they amount to $5000—$100, and where the sales are less than $5000—$50.

THE USURY LAW.

As the House last week spent the greater portion of the time in the discussion of the salary bill (judicial) so this week it has found another subject for talk in the bill providing for the repeal of the usury laws, and the increase of the legal rate of interest. The objections urged against this bill is that it works in the interest of the rich, and to the detriment of the poor. Considerable opposition is manifested against it, and it is a question whether it will become a law.

PUBLISHING NEW CONSTITUTION.

The bill authorizing the payment of the papers which published the new Constitution by the authority of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, is now under consideration in the House. The amount of the claims up to the present time reaches $167,434 87½ (some honest editor charged the annexed quarter of a cent.) There seems to be a strong disposition among the membrs to pay all the papers which published the new constitution whether authorized by the Secretary of the Commonwealth or not, inasmuch as it was information of the greatest importance and required the largest possible dissemination.

PHILADELPHIA Feb. 18th.

Stokely elected Mayor of this city by 12,000 majority.

FIGHT BACK.

The majority of persons teach their children not to fight under any circumstances; and in fact some are so ignorant, as to punish their children if they resent indignities or assaults. There never was a greater mistake than this. The Scriptures don't teach such doctrine, they are not in consonance with reason, or nature. If children observe such instuctions until they reach manhood, they will in nine cases out of ten, be unable to meet the responsibilities that will devolve upon them when they reach maturity. Any intimidation, or boisterous language on the part of those they are dealing with, will deter them, and others will take the advantage of them. Parents should teach their children to eschew bad company, to avoid difficulties, but never tamely to submit to blows or insults. Children should be allowed, and in fact taught to fight when imposed upon, or assaulted by their companions.—Mt. Union Times.

IT is definitely settled that the investigation into the municipal affairs of Washington City and especially into the doings of the Board of Public Works, is to be had at once. The taxpayers of the District have clamored for such an investigation for a long time, but the Washington press and the office holders have as persistently fought against it.—But the pressure came so hard, that Congress was forced to yield and the committee has already been announced. It may be that everything is as it should be, but the opposition to an investigation, leads many to believe that things may be disclosed which may seriously effect the characters of some of the leading men of the District and perhaps of Congressmen themselves. The present Governor of the District was formerly chairman of the Board of Public Works and is therefore deeply interested in the proposed investigation.

MORE CHINESE.—Two steamers have arrived at San Francisco from Hong Kong, bringing over 2,000 Chinese passengers between them. Instead of an abatement of the immigration of these people to this coast, the appearances now are they will come this summer in greater numbers than ever before, as the intelligence from Hong Kong is that the Chinese are chartering steamers in that city, loading them with coolies, and sending them to San Francisco. Five or six steamers freighted with Mongolians are no on their way, and about 15,000 Chinese are awaiting, in Hong Kong, shipment to the Pacific coast.—The indications are that we may expect them here this season in numbers three times greater than in any previous year.

GEN. LUTHER MCCUTCHINS was selected by one of the political parties of New Hampshire, as candidate for Governor, because he is a practical farmer and it was supposed that he would be popular with the grangers. Judging from some of his recent speeches, his sympathy with the Western farmers' movement is not very deep. He says, "all the talk about farmers being oppressed is nonsense, and that on the average, farming is better business than trading or being Governor." He got uneasy once and went West, but was glad to get back from that lazy country. He bought a farm that would cut but fifteen tons of hay and now its cuts fifty, and he has all the comforts that would make a man happy. He likes the good old rocky hills of New London in the Granite State, and proposes to stay there, remaining a farmer whether he is elected Governor or not. This is sensible talk and will be endorsed by a majority of our New England farmers, who will take new courage and more pride in their honorable employment, but the General has made himself a target for the Western grangers who will not be slow in opening their batteries upon him.

This may possibly be because a majority of the people of the United States—who do—take no stock in John Quincy Adams.

STATE ITEMS.

—They are searching for led in Clinton county, with good prospects of success.

—The Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias, of this State, will meet at the Assembly building, Philadelphia, next Tuesday.

—The Allentown Chronicle says the Perkiomen Valley Railroad tunnel through the Lehigh mountain will be finished by April 1.

—Rev. William Eyer, of Catawissa, fell and was trampled by a horse on the 6th inst., and died from his injuries on Sunday, the 8th inst.

—Benjamin Morris, of little Britain township, Lancaster county, died suddenly a few days ago, of paralysis. He was eighty-four years old.

—Captain Basil Bowen, of George township, Fayette county, Pa., a soldier of the war of 1812, died on Monday, February 2, 1874, aged eighty-eight years.

—The temperance men of Blair will hold a county mass convention in Hollidaysburg on the 23d inst., in opposition to the repeal of the Local Option law.

—During the progress of the recent religious revival in the Methodist Episcopal Church, at Johnstown, there were three hundred and sixty persons united with the church.

—Scranton has a family eight of whom are sick with the small-pox. The father died of the disease some time ago, and those living are almost wholly destitute of food or clothing.

—Mr. Jacob Ammon, of Glade, Warren county has buried five children within the past three months. The two last ones died of diptheria, and another one is sick with this dread disease.

—The strike of the hoop-pole cutters in Clinton county resulted in the loss of a week's time, a reduction of two dollars per thousand, and the discharge of a few of the refractory ones.

—Change of Editors.—There is shortly to be a change the management of one of the Republican papers at Huntingdon, and we venture the opinion no matter on which it is, it will be a change for the better.

—Constable McNamara, of Scranton, who was so badly beaten by a crowd of roughs on the night of the 6th inst., died on the 9th. And now the Scranton mind is exercised over the conundrum, who are the murderers

—The Lehigh Iron Company's furnace No. 2 at Allentown, recently made thirty-six tons and eighteen hundred weight of Superior No. 1, iron in one day. This is an anthracite furnace sixty feet high, and seventeen feet at boshes.

—Stephen Kern, of Allentown, scalded himself very badly by spilling hot coffee over his legs. He is in a critical condition in consequence.

—Abraham R. Peoples, of Knox township, Clearfield county, was instantly killed on the 4th inst. He and Mr. George Bowman were hauling a large spar, when in some way it swung round, and catching Mr. Peoples head between it and a tree, crushed his head and broke his neck

—There are four miles of teams hauling timber on the Penfield road, says the Clearfield Raftsman's Journal, and if a person happens to be going toward the place, just at the right time of day, he has the pleasure of hauling off to one side and waiting for that four miles of teams to pass. They make two trips a day, rendering travel unsafe as well as decidedly inconvenient.

—This is euphemism with avengeance. The Philadelphia "Reform" candidate for TAX Receiver having, by reason of cumulative and apparently indisputable testimony, been shown to be an ex-New York confidence man, swindler and thief, which compelled him to withdraw from the canvass, the Philadelphia Press actually applauds him for "gracefully giving way." If, now, the moral stamina of that paper were only equal to its politeness, what a wonderful agent of "Reform" might it not become.

—Several evenings since an individual entered the evening train at Reading for Philadephia On the conductor taking up tickets the man had none, and after emptying out all his pockets he managed to raise the amount of his fare, including the additional twenty-five cent check within one cent. The puncher of pasteboards, however, insisted on that single nickel being forthcoming or he would be compelled to stop the train and put him out. A gentleman passenger kindly loaned the penniless traveler the desired farthing, and the train sped on.

—The Clearfield Journal is informed that Mr. James Wilson, an aged citizen of Goshen township, was frozen to death under the following circumstances: On Friday, January 30th, he had gone to Mr. R. S. Stewart's store, in Girard township, where he purchased some goods, and then started toward Mr. Hite's, in the latter township. The next day, Saturday, 31st, he was found sitting on the side of the road, on the hill near Mr. Hite's, lifeless. It is supposed that, becoming tired, he sat down to rest, and perished form the cold.

—This from the Altoona Tribune: It is rumored that the railroad company is at present engaged in negotiating for a tract of land in the vicinity of Derry station, Westmoreland county, with the view to erecting thereon the necessary shops for the building of palace stock cars and also shops for repairing locomotives plying on the western division. If rumor is correct the shops that are to be erected will be on an extensive scale, and will be fitted up with the most approved machinery of all kinds, while Derry station will at once take rank with the important points along the line of the road.

—The shipbuilding interests, iron and wooden alike—promise to be more active during the coming season than at any period since the war Reports from Maine are to the effect that all the shipyards along the coast are alive with activity and enterprise. Similar reports come from all points on the lakes, while at the famous Chester yards in our own State the incessant clang of hammers and clanking of rivets goes on, making prosperity-giving, labor-supplying, business-producing music, all the while. And these great songs of triumphant labor are the noblest anthems that were ever born.

Poetry.

THE PURITAN LOVERS.

BY MARIAN DOUGLESS.

Drawn out, like lingering bees, to share
The last, sweet summer weather,
Beneath the reddening maples walked
Two Puritans together—

A youth and maiden heeding not
The woods which round them brightened
Just conscious of each other's thoughts,
Half happy and half frightened.

Grave were their brows, and few their words,
And course their grab and simple;
The maiden's very cheek seemed shy
To own its worldly dimple.

For stern the time; they dwelt with Care;
And fear was oft a corner;
A sober April ushered in
The Pilgrims toilful summer,

And stern their creed: they tarried here
Mere desert-land sojourners:
They must not dream of mirth or rest,
God's humble lesson-learners.

The temple's sacred perfumes round
Their week day robes were clinging;
Their mirth was but the golden bells
On priestly garments ringing.

But as to-day they softly talked,
That serious youth and maiden,
Their plainest words strange beauty wore,
Like words with dew-drop laden.

The saddest theme had somewhat sweet,
The gravest something tender,
While with slow steps they wondered on
'Mid summer's fading splendor.

He said, "Next week the church will hold
A day of prayer and fasting;"
And then he stopped, and bent to pick
A white life-everlasting—

A silvery bloom, with fadeless leaves;
He gave it to her, sighing.
A mute confession was his glance,
Her blush a mute replying.

"Mebitabel?" (at last he spoke),
"My fairest one and dearest!
One thought is ever in my heart
The sweetest and the nearest."

"You read my soul; you know my wish;
O, grant me its fulfilling!"
She answered low, "If Heaven smiles,
And if my father's willing!"

No idle pa sion swayed her heart,
This quiet New-England beauty!
Faith was the guardian of her life;
Obedience was a duty.

Too trurthful for reserve, she stood,
Her brown eyes earthward casting,
And held with trembling hand the while
Her white life-everlasting.

Her sober answer pleased the youth—
Frank, clear, and gravely cheerful;
He left her at her father's door,
Too happy to be fearful.

She looked on high with earnest plea,
And Heaven seemed bright above her:
And when she shyly spoke his name,
Her father praised her lover.

And when, that night, she sought her couch
With head-board high and olden,
Her prayer was praise, her pillow down,
And all her dreams were golden.

And still upon her throbbing heart,
In bloom and breath undying,
A few life-everlasting flowers,
Her lover's gift, were lying

O Venus, myrtles, fresh and green!
O Cupid's blushing roses!
Not on your classic flowers alone
The sacred light reposes.

Though gentler care may shield your buds,
From north winds rude and blasting,
As dear to Love, those few, pale flowers
Of white life-everlasting.

Our Story Teller.

A MARRIED MAN;
Or How the School Committee was Outwitted

"What shall I do?"

Ralph Willett looked the picture of despair as he walked into the office of his friend, Bob Ayers, and launched the afore-said question at him.

"Why, what's the trouble now?" and good-natured Bob, a young lawyer who had just hung out his shingle, shut up the musty volume of legal lore over which he had been poring, and gave his attention to Ralph's grievance.

"It's just this," and Ralph opened his clenched hand, disclosing a letter crushed into a thousand despairing wrinkles. "Here's my answer from the trustees of Monroe Academy; they are satisfied with my recommendations, and my references appear unexpectations, but on one point they are strenuous—they will employ none but a mrried man."

"Pshaw!" blurted out Bob.

"Hear what they say: 'Only one question remains to be affirmatively answered by you before we close in with your terms: Are you a married man? You may think the question a strange one, but we have had so much trouble in the past with preceptors who, after the first few weeks, devoted themselves mainly to flirting, that we have passed a resolution as unalterable as the law of the Medes and Persians, that we will employ none but married men. If you can suit us in that respect, our contract may be considered closed. Let us hear from you at once in regard to that particular, and we hope you are prepared to meet our requirements, as we confess ourselves predisposed in your favor. Yours truly, William Peters, Sec. of the Board of Trustees.'"

"Let 'em go," said Bob, as Ralph finished reading, and glanced up at him. "There are other academies in the world, and not all blessed with such an old-maid board of trustees."

"But it is getting late in the season, and 'twill soon be impossible to engage a place for the coming year. The opening seems to be a fine one, but it's a hard case if I must be married, nolens volens, in order to teach."

"I don't suppose," mused Bob, "that it would be of any use for me to write them a voucher for your unexceptional morals and anti-flirting principles?"

Ralph shook his head with a smile. There was a moment's silence.

"I tell you what," burst forth Bob, "here's my advice to you as a friend and a lawyer, and no fee wanted either; make 'em think you are a married man; you can convey the impression without saying it in so many words, if that will ease your conscience."

"Bob Ayers! you're crazy!"

"No—just look here," and Bob ran over a hasty plan of arrangements. "Upon my word, it's easily done, and the idea grows better and better."

Ralph was in a mood to clutch at anything, just then, for teaching was his chosen vocation, and he felt in honor bound to support his widowed mother in easy comfort. Before half an hour he had so fallen in with Bob's absurd proposition as to write, with his assistance, a response to the board of trustees. Here is the clause which most interests us:

"Fortunately, for me, your one important requirement is not at all an impossible one in my case. I shall not, however, bring Mrs. Willett to Monroe with me at present, as she does not like boarding, and it is hardly worth while to set up housekeeping there when I am only engaged for a year, and we have a good home here. It seems best, on the whole that she should remain here among her friends for the present, so you will please engage board for me alone in some quiet family near the academy."

"There," said Bob, triumphantly, "even Mrs. Opie might be satisfied with that, for there is a Mrs. Ralph Willett of whom all you say is true, but she is your mother, and not your wife."

"It's a dangerous game, I fear," said Ralph, closing and sealing the letter, "but, I believe my intentions are good. If they find me out I shall probably suffer."

"They will not be apt to find out the facts at this distance, but if they do, they won't hang you, my boy. I should put in a plea of self-defense if I had to defend the case."

"I shall saddle all the blame that occurs on to you, for I never should have thought of such a thing myself."

"My shoulders are broad," laughed Bob, and lawyers are generally supposed to be incorrigible sinners, you know. But never fear; the crime is not a great one. Going into a strange place and palming one's self off as a single man when one is married has a suspicious look, but passing for a married man when one is single is quite another thing.

A month later Ralph Willett opened the fall term of Monroe academy.

The close of the first day of school. Down the shaded sidewalk went a trio of school-girls, Rose Peters, a handsome, dressy belle, Kate, Martin, the wise and witty, and Effie Broomfield, a sweet gentle girl and universal favorite, spite of her humble home and plain attire.

'Isn't he perfectly splendid!' exclaimed Rose, the pronoun referring to the new preceptor, our whilom acquaintance, Ralph Willett.

'What an intelligent, expressive eye he has,' remarked Kate.

'Yes,' assented Effie, 'and such a finely shaped head. One needn't be a phrenologist to notice that.'

'I do think,' said Rose candidly, 'that he is really the most attractive preceptor that we ever had in our academy.'

'Take care, Rose,' laughed Kate, 'no flirting now, you know,' for Rose was a first-class flirt, and her capabilities in that line had done more than all else to turn the heads of the two last preceptors and abate their usefulness in the school. No wonder her father had introduced that remarkable resolution among the board of trustees.

Rose turned in at the gate of her father's handsome residence, but paused for a few more words. 'Just as if,' she said, 'a married man couldn't possibly flirt! For my part I think they're just the best men of all to flirt with.'

'Rose Peters!' said Effie reprovingly, 'It is well for your credit that only your freinds hear that speech.'

'I mean it,' persisted Rose. 'They're so safe, you know, not being on the look-out for a wife, and one can go to any lengths without the least fear they will spoil it all by popping the question.'

'I suppose,' remarked Kate, 'that very question was just what you aimed at in your flirtations.'

'It's no such thing. I always avoid it as long as possible, for it spoils the fun. When I can stave it off no longer, and they will speak, I am always as lenient as possible with the poor fellows, and tell them I hope we shall be friends all the same, but we never are. Somehow there is always a coolness after that.'

'Rose,' said Effie, seriously, "I must either change my definition of a flirt, or give up that you are not one.'

'What is your definition?'

'I have always called a young lady a flirt who led on young men to declare themselves for the sake of refusing them.'

'Then I'm not one, according to your own definition.'

'I must confess,' said Kate, outspoken, as usual, 'I don't see what better you are, save from selfish motives. The effect on them is the same.'

'I can't help it if young men will be so foolish as to fall in love with me,' persisted Rose. "All I want is a good time, and no vexatious questions about marriage. That's why I like married men the best you see."

"Allow me to prophesy, Miss Rose," said Kate, 'that you've found one martied man who won't flirt with you, and that's Mr. Willett.' And with this parting shot, she and Effie walked on.

A week later, and the Monroe ladies' sewing circle was convened, with its usual assortment of thimbles, talking and tattling.

'Wal, a new broom sweeps clean,' remarked Miss Grum, a billious-looking female, with false teeth, and dyed hair, 'so I s'pose this Mr. Willett'll be a perfect mericle for a spell.'

"He's as pretty as a pink, now, I say," put in Annabel Simpson, a rather soft-hearted old maid.

"He is a pretty man," echoed old Mrs. Watkins, "and just the best boarder I ever had at my table. He's dreadful quiet and orderly, too; you'd hardly known there was a soul in the house."

"What room does he have, Mrs. Watkin?" asked Rosamond Green, more for the sake of further general information about the stranger than anything else.

"The front chamber, and he keeps it just as neat as wax. His wife must be a particular soul—men ain't neat without trainin."

'I should like to see her," said Annabel, her big, innocent blue eyes looking as childishly curious as if she had been five years old instead of fifty.

"He don't say much about her," said Mrs. Watkins, who was just now the centre of information. "I said to him, the first day, that I was afeard he'd be kind of lonesome without his wife, and he said he meant to keep so busy as to have no time to be lonesome. But he's just the modestest man! I asked him if he had any children and he colored clear up to his eyes and said, 'No ma'am.' (Here a giggling among the girls in the corner.) I asked him how long he'd been married, and he colored redder than ever, and said, 'Not long.' I begin to fear he'd think I was too inquisitive, so I didn't say no more, but I'm sure I didn't mean to pry into his affairs, only just to show an interest in him."

"I guess he sets enough store by his wife," said little Ers. Elliott, the postmistress. "He's sent her three letters a'ready, and all in white envelopes with a monogram, and scented."

"Fiddlesticks on scented paper and monogrammars, or whatever they are!" said Miss Grum, spitefully. "They ain't no sure sign o' love."

"The main thing to be considered," remarked the president, Rev. Mrs. Warner, in her dignified manner, "is whether he will teach a good school. We have had such scandalous goings-on in our academy that I, for one, rejoice if we have, at least, a steady, sensible married man as preceptor."

"He won't take the lead in flirting, that'll be some consolation," remarked Mrs. Peters, the mother of Rose. "Somehow the girls all seem possessed, lately, and if a new beau comes into town, be he lord or beggar, they're all after him."

"I'm sure I don't run after the beaux," said Annabel Simpson, in as deeply injured a tone as though she considered herself especially implicated, whereat the girls in the corner had another giggle.

"Nor I neither, not be no manner of means," echoed Miss Grim, so fiercely that the corner became uproarious with merriment, and the president prudently changed the subject of the conversation.

MONROE, October 10.

Dear Bob: It's the middle of the term, and—as said the lamented Daniel Webster—"I still live."

Really and truly, I'm enjoying my school much except for that one thing which makes me feel guilty all the while. You and I alone know what this is. But I can see the wisdom of the trustees in their stipulation, for I never yet found a lot of school-girls so harum-scarum as they are here. Thus Miss Peters is an only child, a beauty and an heiress, and very much spoiled; her whole mind, heart and soul seems to be absorbed in conjugating the verb to flirt in all its moods and tenses. She even tried her arts upon me, but, laying aside my "married" pretense, I never fancied that style of young lady. Failing in that she took to pouting and creating rebellion in school. I took a straight course and sent her home to ponder on the error of her ways; she came back, the next day, asked my forgiveness very sweetly, and has been as good as a kitten, ever since, but I look for the claws daily. There are other high spirits in school, but she is the belle and acknowledged leader. Then there are some quiet, orderly ones, just my idea of girls as they should be, but I musn't forget that I'm a married man.

Bob, you remember I hold you responsible for my white lies, this year. I'm as careful as possible, but fear Mrs. Opie might sometimes be shocked.

Yours, hastily, RALPH WILLETT.

Thus Ralph went on, winning golden opinions from everybody, gaining the love and respect of his scholars, and more than all, in the eyes of some, bringing back to Monroe academy its former reputation. The school bade fair to increase in size, thus adding to the material prosperity of the place, and we are all ready to love anybody who helps to fill our pockets.

At the close of the term he went home to spend a fortnight's vacation.

'He is kind o' extravagant I guess,' remarked Jerusha Grum. 'His journey back and to, two days in the cars each way 'll cost him sumthin'."

'Now I don't blame him a bit for goin' home,' said Mrs. Watkins. "'Course he wants to see his wife, and he will be there to Thanksgiven', too. They have never been separated afore.'

'How do you know?'

'I asked him if they had. 'Twas the mornin' he went away, and he seemed as pleased about going as if he was a little boy goin' home to see his mother.'

Could Mrs. Watkins have seen the silver-haired old lady who met Ralph and embraced him so tenderly, she might have thought the cases were more than paralled.

Ralph and Bob Ayres had some quiet laughs over their secret. Bob prophesied great things as its result. 'I tell you, Ralph,' he'd say, 'I believe it is sometimes right to do evil that good may came out of it.'

'Don't let us crow till we get out of the woods,' Ralph replied. 'I have gained a good situation by the deception, but it remains to be seen how long I keep it.

The winter school proved to be quite different from the fall. Many new faces were among the pupils—some of the old ones missing—among the latter Effie Broomfield.

'She has taken a school a way in the south part of the town.' Rose Peters volunteered this information when she came to the desk, after school to consult Willett as to what she had better read in Latin. 'Isn't it funny to think of Effie teaching?'

'I have no doubt she will do well,' was the answer. 'Other things being equal, I have always noticed that the best behaved scholars make the best teachers.'

'Oh! you do not think I would make a very good teacher then do you?' I was very naughty last term, you know, but I am going to be good enough this, to make it all up.' And Rose lisped off her little speech in such an innocent, childish manner, and looked so pretty all the while, that a more impressible man than Ralph Willett might have been captivated: he was not at all. 'Of course Effie will do well,' she continued, 'she is such a splendid girl. I want to go out and see her some Saturday but father is always too busy to carry me.'

Where was Ralph Willett's gallantry that he did not offer his services as escort on this plain hint? But he did not; only resolved that he would go by himself at the earliest possible opportunity. There was nothing out of character even for a married man to take an interest in his former pupil, and watch her success as teacher.

He went accordingly, the very next Saturday. How charmingly dignified the little school-ma'am was, and how her sunny presence lit up the dingy old school-house! The school was a notoriously hard one, but she was beginning finely, as Ralph assured her, and added that he should come again, by and by, to note her progress.

Somehow or other, he did not enjoy the winter term as well as the fall. His mother noticed the change in his letters, and spoke of it in hers.

'I do not think you are enjoying your school as well as you did in the fall. Your letters are not so cheery.

'Why don't I enjoy myself so well?' Ralph asked himself. 'All is harmonious in school.' Then he laid the blame upon the cold weather, and bad roads which hindered his long walks, but somehow all his cogitations would come around at last to Effie Broomfield, and he would fall to wondering how she was getting on, if she had to burn green wood in that rusty three-legged stove, if she was contented boarding around, etc. And in school-hours, when some blundering pupil was mixing moods and tenses in a hopeless tangle, trying to conjugate amo or standing at the blackboard helpless in the mazes of a geometrical problem, it was certainly curious how his thoughts always reverted to Effie, the musical way in which Latin verbs in all their forms came readily from her lips, and the clear-headed and neat-handed way in which she would elucidate a problem. Effie Broomfield! It was not the most harmonious name in the world, but he often found himself repeating it mentally, over and over, as if it were a strain of music.

Near the close of the term he went again to visit the school. Well might he feel pride in his pupil as he noticed the results of her winter's work. Rude, gawky boys were transformed into young gentlemen, and romping, hoydenish girls into young ladies—all through her influence. Their progress in learning had been both rapid and thorough, and Ralph, in his delight, was not at all sparing in his encomiums. The little school ma'am took them as demurely as though they were a matter of course, seeming to feel in no wise flattered, and Ralph somehow felt himself her inferior.

'She is just the one for a teacher,' he said to himself, as he pursued his solitary way homeward. 'What a splendid wife she would make for some man who intended to make that his life-work!'

He did not go home at the winter vacation, it only being for a week.

'It is almost too bad,' said Mrs. Watkins to him consolingly, 'I dare say it looks a long time ahead before you will see your wife.'

'It does, really,' replied Ralph, with a blush that set Mrs. Watkins into silent admiration of his modesty.

Mrs. Elliott informed the curious ones that Mr. Willett sent out a letter to his wife every day through vacation, and was obliging enough to show to several the white monogram envelopes, whereon 'Mrs. Ralph Willett,' in writting almost as handsome as engraving, stood, to their minds, as an evidence of high marital effection.

The spring term opened with a great increase of scholars, and Ralph needed an assistant. Effie Broomfield was among the pupils—but he was so impressed with her superiority as a teacher, that he offered her the post of assistant; she finally consented, with reluctance, to teach half the day, giving the other half to her studies. Kate Martin was engaged to the same by the other half of the day, and the school went bravely on.

It was a lovely spring. The snow went off in such good temper, no angry winds nor dismal rains, the brooks burst into music as soon as ever they broke their icy chains, and the birds sang sweetly as never did before; at least this was the way it seemed to Ralph Willett. Every night, at the close of school, he was wont to hold a little conference at the desk of Miss Broomfield; somehow there was always something to inquire about or suggest, and then they often walked down the street together as far as Mrs. Watkins's gate.

'I do think, Effie,' said Rose Peters enviously, one day 'that you are getting to be a real flirt. Mr. Willett is altogether too attentive to you for a married man.'

Effie's eyes flashed indignantly. 'You have no occasion to make such a remark. Mr. Willett says nothing to me but what is proper and business-like, and anybody might hear.'

'Oh! now, don't fly into a passion about it,' laughed Rose, twirling the multitudinous ring on her fingers; "I only meant to joke you a little, although truth to tell, if he wasn't a married man I should think he was dead in love with you; his eyes follow you everywhere—and when you speak he seems to devour every word you say.'

"Hush!" said Effie, authoritatively, though not a soul was in hearing, "I won't listen to such nonsence."

'Oh! you innocent little darling!' laughed Rose, 'I only wish I had your chance in Mr. Willett's eyes, I'd make that wife of his jealous.'

'It's a pity that the devoted attention of all the unmarried men in town will not suffice you, but you must sigh after the married.'

'Children are always crying for the moon, you know. Perhaps, if Mr. Willett wasn't a married man, he'd be no better than the rest, but, as it is, there's not a young man in town worth mentioning, the same day.'

All pleasant things in this world must come to an end sooner or later, and this pleasant spring term was no exception to the rule. It closed in May, with a grand exhibition, but the night proved, as exhibition nights are prone to, dark and rainy. Dame Nature, after being on good smiling behavior all the term, might be pardoned for making this closing night a time for her most copious tears.

Effie Broomfield wended her way to the exhibition under her father's escort with the triple aid of his arm, lantern, and umbrella.

'You make such a splendid beau, father; you don't seem at all afraid of wetting your own boots, and leaving me the best walking.'

'Thanks for the compliment, but I dare say you'll be leaving me in a lurch, and allowing one of those same glossy-booted young men to walk home with you. It's the way of the ungrateful world, you know.'

'But not my way,' said Effie, stoutly, 'I'm engaged to you for to-night, so don't forget, to wait for me; your lantern, umbrella, and general good sare are altogether irresistible.'

The Hall was crowded to overflowing in spite of the rain, and Effie, from her seat away in front, did not notice that her father was called out before the exhibition was half over. At the close, donned her wraps, and while she spoke the good-by to one and another of her schoolmates, waited and watched for her father.

He did not come, though the hall was fast emptying. Two or three offers of company home she declined, still thinking he must be there, when up came Fred Peters, a crony of her brother Jack.

'Oh! Miss Effie! I've been looking for you; your father was called out to serve on a jury, but he left his lantern and umbrella with Jack and told him to see to you. But Jack, he'd been and offered his company home to Minnie Warner before that, so he asked me to tell you to wait till he came back.

Effie groaned in spirit, for Minnie Warner's home was away at the other end of the long street. Was there ever anything so inconsiderate as a younger brother of 16? She went to the window and interviewed the weather, if perhaps she might make the trip alone and unprotected, but it was raining in torrents, and fearfully dark. There was no alternative but to wait for Jack to play the gallant and done with it. Yet the crowd were gone, and the lamps were being put out; only one remained, when Mr. Willett suddenly came up the stairs and re-entered the room.

'You here still! Miss Broomfield,' he exclaimed, 'I supposed everybody was gone. I came back for a book I forget,' and he picked it up from a table near.

A few words sufficed to explain Effie's awkward dilemma. 'Never mind,' he said, 'if you will accept my company home, I shall be happy to relieve you from the unpleasant situation.' She accepted the offer in the same spirit in which it was made, and soon found herself on the way home with a lantern as bright, an umbrella as large, and arm as reliable as her father's.

As for Ralph Willett, it was the first time since his coming to Monroe that he had waited upon a lady, but the occupation was far from uncongenial. Indeed, the very lively tattoo which his heart was beating, as for the first time Effie Broomfield's hand rested on his coat sleeve convinced him fully of what he might have known long before, if he would have acknowledged it to himself, that he was hopelessly in love with her. And all the while she, innocent little thing! was chatting as freely and unsuspiciously as if he was her grandfather! How guilty he felt when he remembered that she and all the rest of the Monroe-ites looked on him as a married man, and how afraid he was she would hear his heart beating so tumultuously!

Commonplace remarks are the safest under such circumstances, so Ralph spoke of the rain, the mud, this evening's exercises, and, finally, the prospect for the summer term. 'I do not expect to need an assistant,' he said, 'but hope you will attend the school,' trying hard not to appear unduly anxious on the subject.

'I should like to,' said Effie, 'but I must be taking care of myself now, and cannot do just what I would prefer.'

'You will try teaching again?'

'Yes, sir, but not here. I have not mentioned the matter to any one as yet, lest something should happen to defeat my plan, but now the time is so near I may tell you that I expect to go to Virginia to teach. A friend there has kindly procured me a situation, and I must start, next week.

To Virginia! Next week! Ralph forgot all his caution, and his married-man pretenses, forgot everything in the dread of losing her, and, clasping her hand, burst eagerly forth:—

'Don't go! Effie! dearest Effie! I love you as my own life. Do not leave me—'

Is that quiet Effie Broomfield? that indignant, scornful maiden, who tore herself away from him, from under the shelter of his umbrella, and with flashing eyes exclaimed:—

'Leave me! this instant, Mr. Willett, and never let me see your face again! Oh! what have I ever done that you should so insult me?" and her strength failing, she leaned against the the fence and gave away to a torrent of tears.

"Miss Broomfield," said Ralph, in his dilemma, "will you think me more or less of a villain if I tell you I have never been married?"

"You have spoken of your wife," said Effie.

"Of Mrs. Willett, I acknowledge, but she is my mother, and not my wife. I have never been married, and shall never be unless you consent to be my wife," and he offered her his arm again. "I beg pardon for alarming you so—but I spoke on the impulse of the moment."

What was Effie to do? It still rained hard—she was almost home—so she took his arm again, and walked on, listening to his hurried explanation.

"It was wicked in me to deceive you all so, I grant, but I needed the situation, and knew they would not trust me as a single man. Do you blame me very much?"

They were at the door now. "I hardly know," she said, for her own heart was pleading his case.

"May I come and see you in the morning, then, you and your father?" and with her half whispered "Yes," he pressed her hand warmly, with a "Good-night," and departed; meeting the delinquent Jack just at the gate.

"Found a beau, didn't you, sis?" said Jack as he came leisurely in. "I knew you would, you always do, so I didn't hurry."

Effie escaped to her room and lay half the rest of the night pondering on this state of things. Was she really herself or somebody she had read about in a book? It was about as puzzling a case as that of the old woman with shortened skirts in "Mother Goose.

Morning brought Mr. Willett to electrify her parents with his revelations. He made his case so clear there was no doubt of his honesty, but at his request they forebore to say anything abroad, until, two days later, in response to a telegram, down to Monroe came his mother, Bob Ayres, and the old gray-haired minister who had known him from a baby upward. They brought proof enough of the truth of Ralph's assertions, Bob Ayres generously taking upon himself all the blame of Ralph's deception, and giving an account in his graphic way of how it came about, so Effie no longer hesitated to give her hand where, it was useless to deny, her heart had already preceded it.

Of course, Monroe was all ablaze. But everybody so idolized Mr. Willett that all seemed willing to extenuate the case. The general sentiment of the community was the same, expressed by Mrs. Watkins to Ralph's mother, and curiously enough, the same that Bob Ayres gave utterance to at the outset.

"Now, Mrs. Willett, if your son had come here callin' himself a single man, when he was married, I couldn't overlook it in him as long aa I live, but comin' here and callin' himself married, when he was single, jest to keep the girls from runnin' after him, that's altogether a different thing."

Ralph went to the trustees, acknowledged his fault, and tendered his resignation, which they utterly refused to accept.

"No, indeed," said the president of the board, "rather consider yourself bound to us for life," and he shook him warmly by the hand. "The crime of being unmarried is easily atoned for," and the worthy man put on such a knowing look, that Ralph colored up like a vertible school-girl.

So Effie did not go to Virginia, but her traveling suit was ready for her bridal trip, the next week, and when Ralph Willett came back to Monroe to commence his summer term, it was, indeed and in truth a married man.

COSMOLINE

COSMOLINE is the concentrated extract of the healing properties of Petroleum, which are known. It is the most bland and soothing remedy ever used; beside possessing more healing power than any substance or compound ever prepared. It is for almost all the daily casualties which occur in household, the workshop, or on the farm, as well as for many of the diseases which afflict humanity.

FOR BURNS AND SCALDS

It is invaluable, cooling and soothing the injured parts at once, and producing a perfect cure in a very short time, without leaving any scars. For this purpose alone, it is

A BLESSING TO THE WORLD,

FOR FROSTED LIMBS, COSMOLINE is fully as efficacious as for burns and scalds, restoring a healthy action to the injured parts very quickly. It is also the best possible remedy for Chilblains and Chapped Hands.

FOR RHEUMATISM especially Inflammatory, most forms of NEURALGIA, swelling of Limbs or Glands, COSMOLINE affords in the shortest possible time the HAPPIEST RELIEF.

FOR CUTS AND BRUISES, the action of COSMOLINE is almost magical. If promptly applied, it prevents soreness, and the wounds heal very rapidly.

FOR PILES, it has proved to be an unequalled remedy, and many a sufferer has blessed the day of its introduction.

FOR SKIN DISEASES we can recommend it with the greatest confidence, especially for Salt Rheum, Tetter, Eczema, etc., and Teething humours.

We might go on enumerating the many other conditions for which it is unequalled, but will only add that wherever there is inflammation from any cause, COSMOLINE brings a rapid and happy relief, and will be the dependence under all circumstances. COSMOLINE is Prescribed by the best physicians, both allopathic and homeopathic. It is but nature's own production, brought into an agreeable and pleasant condition, and is as safe to use anywhere as fresh cream.

ELAINE

AS AN ILLUMINATOR.

WHY IT IS THE SAFEST.

ELAINE will not explode while burning in a lamp, nor in any other way, as it does not contain any of the explosive compounds so frequently met with in the ordinary oil for illuminating. A lamp, filled with ELAINE, if upset or accidently broken, will not explode or burn. There is no position in which you can put a lamp filled with ELAINE, for common use, in which it will explode. As no other illuminator has such advantages of safety, ELAINE IS CERTAINLY THE SAFEST FAMILY ILLUMINATING OIL KNOWN.

VINEGAR BITTERS

VEGETABLE — FREE FROM ALCOHOL — PURELY — DR. WALKER'S — CALIFORNIA — EUREKA

VINEGAR BITTERS

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritent, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS occasionally.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

THE NEW FREIGHT DEPOT.—Are we to have a new freight depot? and where shall it be located? are questions frequently asked in Bellefonte nowa-days. If we are to have a new one, it is to be presumed that the old depot is no longer suited to the increasing trade in freights. The railroad company will probably not build a new depot until there is a positive necessity therefor, and if S. S. Blair, the Superintendent, will take the trouble to examine the question thoroughly, we have no doubt he will conclude to leave the arrangements as they are now. A Watchman correspondent of last week has noticed that there is sometimes trouble in finding standing room for twenty-eight or thirty cars of freight at one time. That is true, but there never was a time when twenty eight or thirty cars were brought here to be left standing on the siding. There has always been sufficient siding, but if there should in the future, arise demands for more siding, there is plenty of room to extend it. The railroad company has been negotiating for the purchase of the new road to the car shops, and when that is consumated plenty of siding room will be had for three times the amount of freight that comes here daily. There is, therefore, no necessity for a new depot on that ground. The Watchman correspondent suggests that a good place for the depot would be on his (the correspondents) farm at Sunny Side below town. Let us see. Our merchants and business men would much rather have the depot where it is, when it answers all purposes and is right in the town, than to have it located in Spring township, which would compel them to haul freight three times the distance they now have. The distance from Bellefonte alone would make such a change a very bad one.—The company might as well move the passenger depot into Spring township as to move the freight depot over there.—There is as much sense in the one scheme as in the other. Again, it is a recognized fact that Capt. W. W. Potter is one of the best agents in the employ of the railroad company; it is true that he has but one arm, but with the aid of two assistants his duties are managed faithfully and well. Should a new freight depot be built in Spring township it would be utterly impossible for Mr. Potter with his present assistants to transact the business at both depots. His present salary would not warrant him in hiring more help, and the company would either have to increase his salary or employ a man with two hands. Who is there in this town that would listen to such an arrangement? Why should these extra duties be put upon our agent? What is the advantage to be gained? Such a change would benefit no one in the borough—it might enhance the value of the Spring township property of the Watchman correspondent.

Then, too, if the new depot were to be built there it would necessitate the building of a bridge across Spring creek opposite the proposed site of the depot. It would have to be done in order to make a wagon road thereto. This would add at least ten thousand dollars to the one hundred thousand of debt now resting on the borough. Now let our people decide for themselves as to the new depot—whether it will be more economical for the railroad company to construct a few hundred more feet of siding and leave the depot where it is or to build a new one in Spring township, which would compel merchants and others to haul their freight three times as far as they do now, would be a great inconvenience, would add almost doubly to the duties of our agent and would sink the borough ten thousand dollars deeper in debt. No resident of our borough who has its interests at heart would agree to such an arrangement.

The Watchman correspondent loconically says that "there are some perhaps who have axes of their own to grind, who will growl and grumble, but these are of that class who are never satisfied unless their axes are ground first—the only thing they will allow others to do is to grind their noses—such for example are our Tuten Mackeralites." Let us see whose axe would be ground in the proposed depot. It would advantage no one but the "Watchman" correspondent. It would increase the value of his property there considerably. But it must require considerable cheek for a resident of Spring township to say to the railroad company that a new depot for Bellefonte must be built in said township; to say to the merchant "you must haul your goods three times as far as you used to, because my property is being improved thereby;" but these are all blushing modesty when compared to his standing on the borders of Spring township, where he escapes paying borough tax, and commanding Bellefonte to build a bridge worth $10,000 in order that his property may be improved.—The railroad company don't go around improving other people's property for nothing, and Bellefonte was never known to present any outsider with a $10,000 bridge. Let the reader decide whose axe is to be ground.

VINDEX.

(Written for the REPUBLICAN.)

DRUNKENESS.

BY REFORMATION.

The hundreds, the thousands, the millions of drunkards of our country call upon us to deliver them and their families from temptation by banishing the liquor traffic. The time is at hand, it has come, when each must ask, What is my duty in relation to "Local Option?" And each must answer through his or her conscience the question, Can I sign a petition for the repeal of said law and claim to be a member of good society? God's law declares otherwise, and his agent warns you and me against all such acts as being in derogation of his prerogative.—It is an important cricis in the history of our country and race. The responsibilities resting upon us are of vast importance. Can we be the agents of crime and at the same time claim to be the agents of religion and morality, of which an account must be given? No! Any one who signs petitions for the repeal of the "local option law" is simply a traitor to the cause of God and weeping humanity. And should the members of the Senate and House of Representatives harken unto such petitions, and thereby repeal said law, after the same has been ratified by the people for the term of three years at the ballot box, they will bring down upon themselves a disgrace as deep and damning as was that of Aaron Burr for treason; notwithstanding Attorney General Dimmick has given it as his opinion that the Legislature can repeal the "local option law" if it wants to. How much of Satan's lucre did that opinion cost? (He who is Attorney General for the whisky ring). The Son of Man indeed goeth, as it is written of him, but wo to that man by whom the Son of Man is betrayed; good were it for that man if he had never been born St. Mark iv., 21. The liquor traffic is in direct opposition to every grand and noble purpose o life, hence its removal is a positive demand by everything pertaining to the cause of human comfort, peace and happiness. Every duty we owe to our fellow man, to God and society demand our every energy to work for the destruction of this curse of sin and shame. All we hold dear on earth or hope for in Heaven bid us banish this lava of death from our midst. Everything that holds on the plea of relationship to morality or religion commands us to labor for the overthrow of this monster vice.—How Satan pleads for the continuance of his blood-stained cause in words something like these: The interest and influence of an immense amount of men and money engaged in the liquor traffic. The manufacture and sale of liquor is a trade, and if the trade be abolished, tradesmen unfit for any other pursuit are thrown out of employment. Many such silly arguments as these are presented. In the name of common sense when will such arguments cease? The horse thief, gambler, murderer, pickpocket, counterfeiter, &c., &c., are just as respectable in the sight of God as they who are engaged in the manufacturing the means of destruction to the peace of millions upon millions of families, and annually sending the souls of thousands down to hell. When the gospel was introduced into Ephesus, the worshippers of the great Goddess Diana, and those who made money by manufacturing little imitations of her, raised a great hue and cry, and created a monstrous uproar amongst the people because their craft was in danger. So it was when the question of "local option" was raised, and the people were invited to give an expression of their views on the question. Christians, to you I appeal. The drunkards of our country! What do we mean by the million of drunkards! We mean as many miserable abodes of wretchedness and woe.—We mean as many men and women bound in the chains of vice and sin, without God, without hope in the world, a hell in their hearts, a darker, blacker, deeper gulf of perdition beyond the grave. Christians, these souls are something to you. But if these souls, if these degraded human beings are nothing to you, are you safe yourselves? Are your sons and daughters safe? Are your fathers, your brothers, your sisters safe? No, not one. None of them.—This monster traffic threatens the life, the happiness, the souls of all. If they are not yet in his power they are in danger. Are they nothing to you? Have you no duty to perform towards saving or protecting them? Are you the friends of "local option?" If so, we call upon you as such to aid a reformed drunkard in driving the lava of death from our land, in order to save them, to save ourselves. You are not safe, no living, breathing, human being is safe. The liquor traffic is one of those devils that will not be cast out except by prayer and fasting. The church has tried for centuries to cast him out by prayer, but have failed—he is still doing his dirty work. And in the midst of the Church fasting has been tried by temperance organizations for the past fifty years, but still this devil torments both the Church and State.

But with the holy and triple alliance of fasting, praying and voting, we shall conquor this fiend and cast him out. And in no other will the victory be obtained over this grim monster of death. Or Local Option, the great entering wedge to Prohibition, with its handmaidens, individual prosperity, domestic peace, natural grandeur, and power, harmony, and the joy of heaven.

—This is the forcible way in which McClure's candidacy for the Philadelphia Mayoralty strikes intelligent and distinterested observers abroad. The Boston Traveller says:

"The whole affair is the gravest joke of the age, for McClure is nominated in the interest of political purity by the Democrats, and is supported by the Forney Ring, the same corrupt and villainous concern that sought to defeat General Hartranft when he was a candidate for the Governorship of Pennsylvania—a scheme that had for its real object the defeat of General Grant—and McClure himself never before was supposed to be a marvel of purity, though the part he took in the "bolt" of 1872 shows him to be a fool. Mr. Sumner backs Mr. McClure, being the return scratching for the scratching McClure did for him not two years ago. One is reminded, by McClure's position, of Squeer's declaration that his school was "the shop for morals;" and Sumner's support of McClure brings forcibly to recollection Snawley's endorsements of Squeers."

EDITOR'S TABLE.

The February number of the sprightly and popular Magazine gives indications that the promise of making it this year better than ever before, is being amply fulfilled. The principal attraction is the opening article in which we have a continuation of "John Duncan's Widow." Mr. Nasby's great story, which in this number develops new features of interest. Glancing through the remaining pages, we note that Hugh R. Elton has a pleasant bit of suprise for the reader concealed in the story of "Taking in the Lodger;" Richard Grant gives a pungent satire on the management of banks in "Sharper & Co.," while Mary Hartwell pays her respects to her own sex in a brilliant bit of social sarcasm entitled "Mrs. Jennings Payne." Mr. Locke (Nasby) contributes to the present number another of his inimitable sketches entitled "A Persian Vision of the Hereafter;" Birch Arnold, a German legend, well worked into poetry, under the title of "The ride to the Wedding;" and Jeannie Morrison, a well written story of "How it Happened." The selected matter, though few, comprise some of the very best things to be found in late foreign literature. Locke & Jones, Publishers, Toledo, Ohio.

—We have received also this month a book containing a collection of music for advanced players entitled La Crene de la Crene and published by J. L. Peters 599 Broadway, New York, subscriptions, price $4,00 a year payable in advance. This Musical Magazine is really all it pretends to be and should be in the hands of all students and lovers of music. We should be very sorry to miss it from our table and unhesitatingly recommend it to the cordial support of our friends everywhere.

—Demorest's Monthly has made its regular monthly visit. This Magazine seems to improve with each issue. The March number comes to our table redolent with spring novelties, spring music, spring literature, and fashions. This Magazine richly deserves to be called a model. It is printed in beautiful style on fine toned paper, and in every respect is Ne Plus Ultra. The premiums offered are far in advance of all others. Jerome Thompson's Old Oaken Bucket, in size and beauty, is worth several times the cost of the yearly subscription, $3. Address,

W. JENNINGS DEMOREST,
838 Broadway, N. Y.

—And now Demorest's "Young America," which so pleases the young folks, has also come to hand. The number for March contains its usual variety of useful and entertaining reading for the juveniles. Dr. Deem's Stories Illustrating the evils of intemperance, with Cartoons, increases in interest. Every boy and girl should read Young America. Yearly $1 with a beautiful Chromo Premium. Address,

W. JENNINGS DEMOREST,
838 Broadway, N. Y.

A CURE OF LIVER DISEASE.

Rusk, Texas, May 10th, 1873.

Dr. R. V. Pierce:

Dear Sir—My wife last year at this time was confined to her bed with Chronic Liver Disease. I had one of the best doctors to see her, and he gave her up to die, when I came upon some of your medicine. I bought one bottle and commenced giving it. She then weighed 82 lbs.; now she weighs 149 lbs. and is robust and hearty. She has taken eight bottles in all, so you see I am an advocate for your Medicines.

Philadelphia Market Report.

In CLOVERSEED there is a little more activity, but the bulk of the receipts and offerings is of very poor quality, and can only be sold at relatively low figures. Choice is in demand Sales of 500 bus. in lots, at 7½@8c for inferior and fair Pennsylvania, and 9@9½c for good and choice. 100 bus extra re-cleaned sold at 10c. TIMOTHY is worth $3,37½. Small sales of FLAXSEED at $2,25, at which figure it is taken on arrival.

In the BREADSTUFFS market we have to record continued dullness, with no demand except for small lines to meet the wants of the local jobbers and consumers. Prices continue to favor buyers.

The WHEAT market is almost at a stand and prices are relatively far above those of Flour. There is no inquiry except for small lines to meet the wants of the local millers. The bulk of the receips of Spring is intended for direct foreign shipments. Sales of Pennsylvania and Western Red at $1,58a1,65; Amber at $1,68a1,75; Pennsylvania and Western White at $1,80a1,85; 400 bus White Spring at $1,60; No 1 Spring at $1,60a1,62; and No. 2 do at 1,50a1,52. White is quoted at 1,62a1,64.

RYE comes in slowly, and Pennsylvania and Western is in demand at 96c.

CORN being rather quiet, the receipts being somewhat in excess of the demand Sales of 3,000 bus Delaware, Jersey and Pennsylvania Yellow at 76, 77a78c; 3,000 bus do do on private terms; and 400 bus Western mixed at 76c. Damp lots of Yellow cannot be sold above 74a 75 cents.

OATS are steady at full price, with further sales of 2,400 bus Western White at 61a64c; 700 bus Pennsylvania do at 60c; Delaware at 58c; and 700 bus Pennsylvania mixed at 58c.

BARLEY continues scarce and prices rule high. We quote Canada at $2,20a2,25. BARLEY MALT is less active, but prices are firm. Sales of two-rowed at $1,90a2. And four-rowed State and Canada at $2a2,25. The stock here is light and there is very little coming forward.

Agricultural.

☞ NOTE.—We earnestly desire that this department of our paper shall be made as useful as possible to our Agricultural friends, and therefore extend a cordial invitation to all parties interested, to favor us with contributions. Individuals who have made useful experiments and yet do not feel competent to write them out in form for publication, if they will favor us with the results we will take pleasure in putting them in proper shape.

WORDS.

Words are only little things,
Which give life to every day;
Each its pain or pleasure flings,
Passing from our lips away.

These are given for our use,
They our peace can mar or make;
Little words we oft abuse,
When by them we fond hearts breaks.

Words, like water on the ground,
Never can be gathered up;
But like the raindrops, fall around,
Filling evermore life's cup.

Words can wound us and can pour
Deadly poison in the sting,
Words are potent to restore
And the sweetest pleasures bring.

HARRIS TWP., Feb. 10th, '74

Mr. Editor:—I wish to correct a mistake that I find is troubling the minds of some persons more or less in this twp., and other parts of our county. It is respecting the Farmer's Club lately organized in several townships, supposed to be by some of our wise men the beginning of Granges. You know those wonderful select organizations we read about in the great N. West, growing with such rapidity, and power, bearing a telling account in many places, either for good or bad, I will not hearsay which; but time will tell, and he who reads may learn. But I do tell you, that the Farmer's Club of Harris twp., do not intend to make it a secret organization. It may be necessary in some places, and important I have no donbt, to drive farmers in a measure to see to their interists by uniting in secret organizations. We invite all business and professional men, mechanics and day laborers to unite with us at our meetings through the townships, and have a social talk on subjects relating to our business, giving our own and other experience on the different topics as they come in order. Getting new ideas and exchanging opinions is what I understand the object of a Farmer's Club to be. A word, Mr. Editor, how our Club is progressing and I am done—you wished to know. We have met regularly every two weeks since I last informed you, except last Friday. But it takes patience, and no little perseverance to get up good meetings in every place, as we change our meetings to a different place every night, so it is our first lesson to keep cool and try in the race. Our meeting at Boalsburg had a tolerably good attendance, nothing to brag of considering the town. The subject: Feeding of Stock. Our last meeting was on Friday evening of last week, at the Public S. House at Oak Hall, subject: The Taking care of Stock in the most Economical and Profitable Manner over Winter. Our next meeting two weeks after, I think will be at Lemont, or in the neighborhood of the P. S. College, when we expect to have some of the Professors of the P. S. College present. We cordially extend an invitation to our friends in Bellefonte, through your much improved and valuable paper, and we would also be glad to have members from other twp's. attend our meetings. A MEMBER.

Keeping Poultry to Enrich Lands.

Poultry dung is nearly equal in value to Peruvian guano (except that it contains more water). It is granted that a hen will consume more of the different kinds of grain, meat, and vegetables, during the year, than the equivalent of two bushels of corn, which weigh 120 pounds, then it is certainly low enough to place the experiment—the result of the degestion of these two bushels—as equivalent to fifteen pounds of guano. As the manure from 100 fowls, during a year, would amount to 1,500 pounds guano, taking the above supposition, as at least safe; and as three hundred pounds is ordinarily sufficient for an acre of corn, it will be seen that the manure from 100 fowls will make compost enough for five acres. The experiment has been tried by the writer, of applying to one acre of corn in the hill, the manure of twenty hens one year, mixed with swamp muck, in the proportion of one part hen manure and three parts of muck, and the result was a better crop than upon an adjoining acre enriched, for sake of experiment, with a good fair ordinary dressing of stable manure.

WOODHULL is lecturing in Wisconsin, and has got so that she can dodge a frozen potato nine times out of ten.

Summer Fallows.

That there is a wonderful progress in agriculture, a comparison of the practices of the present with the not very remote past abundently shows. There is little doubt but that considerable more profit is derived from the same space of ground, than even men not very old used to obtain. In these increased productions consist the most encouraging of progressive features.

Not thirty years of idleness was an essential feature in the regular rotation of an English farm. The summer "fallows" almost invariably preceded the wheat-sowing. But now the laying down of land to rest as a preliminary to the sowing of grain is rarely thought of. Still it continues in other countries, where the free communion of mind, through the medium of agricultural papers has not been brought about. In France, especially it seems that the practice of summer fallowing is as common as it ever was.

It is quite likely that the change in the practice in England is due indirectly to the writings of Liebig and others, who, about the time we refer to, created much thought by their writings. Because some of their views failed in time to secure the attention hoped for them, there is no doubt that we owe them much. It is, indeed, not always that as much direct good flows from the work of a great genius as is expected; but the indirect good, not so often recognized, is often much greater than all. In this case we have not derived as much benefit from soil analysis as the great agricultural chemists hoped for; and yet what they told us about the elements of nutrition and the nature of plant-food, was no doubt the entering wedge which ultimately broke up a very absurd and wasteful system.

That land will slightly improve by being rested, there is of course no doubt. It was part of the old wasteful system, or on system, of southern agriculture. A crop of cotton or of corn was taken successively from the same land, and then it was left to grow to weeds and briars, until after a few years it was taken in hand for the same crops again. But in this case it was much the decaying matter formed by the weeds, if not wholly by them, as from any imaginary principle of rest.

In this then our generation has gained great advantage. We need not every fifth year or so give a fifth of all we possess as a sacrifice to the recuperative powers of nature. She needs never rest, in the sense that human minds understand. Give fuel to the fire and it will burn forever and with the proper plant-food, continually and intelligently applied, there is no reason why the same piece of land would not bear annual crops to the end of the world.

POINTS OF A COW.—Some idealistic youth puts into poetry the desirable points of a cow as follows:

She's long in her face, she's fine in her bone;
She'll quickly get fat without cake or corn;
She's clean in her jaw and full in her chine;
She's heavy in flank and wide in her line;
She's broad in her rib and long in her rump;
A straight and flat back with never a hump;
She's wide in her hips and calm in her eyes;
She's fine in her shoulders and thin in her thighs;
She's light in her neck and small in her tail;
She's wide in her breast and good at the pail;
She's fine in her bone, and silky of skin;
She's a grazier's without a butcher's within.

The Value of A Newspaper.

A Mechanic tells an interesting story of how he was induced to take a newspaper, and what came of it, as follows:

Ten years ago, I lived in a town in Indiana. On returning home one night—for I am a carpenter by trade—I saw a little girl leave my door, and I asked my wife who she was. She said Mrs Harris had sent after their newspaper, which my wife had borrowed. As we sat down to tea, my wife said to me.

"I wish you would subscribe for the news paper; it is so much comfort to me when you are away from home."

"I would like to do so," said I. "But you know I owe a payment on the house and lot. It will be all I can do to meet it."

She replied: "If you take this paper, I will sew for the tailor to pay for it."

I subscribed for the paper; it came in due time to the shop.—While reading one noon, and looking over it, I saw an advertisement of the County Commissioners to let a bridge that was to be built. I put in a bid for the bridge, and the job was awarded to me, on which I cleared $300. Which enabled me to pay for my house and lot easily, and for the newspaper. If I had not subscribed for the newspaper, I should not have known anything about the contract, and could not have met my payment on my house and lot. A mechanic never loses anything by taking a newspaper.

IN WHICH THERE ARE SOME FUNNY SAYINGS.

A FELLOW with a pistol bullet in his left side, one inch above his heart, a six-inch slash on his head and a broken leg, crawled into a Bangor, Me., doctor's office "to get fixed up," as he pleasantly put it, the other morning. He said "they'd been havin' some fun over to a house" but he declined to designate the domicile more particularly; and possibly they are too well used to these comic eccentricities down in Maine to inquire very closely. They do this sort of thing to perfection in the Indian country, out West, where a man who hankers after pistol bullets can get his stomach full at any time; but then it isn't done for sport; there's always malace prepense in the gleam of the knife, and murder in the voice of the pistol. But this Maine chap is evidently a fellow who can take a joke, and bear no grudge against the giver.

"SAM," said a darkey to his ebony brother, "how am it dat dis yaa telegraf carries de news froo dem wires?"

"Well, Cæsar, now you s'pose dar am a big dog free miles long?"

"Neber was such big dogs; don't b'lieb dat!"

"You jess wait a minit; I'se only illustratin, you stupid nigger. Now, dis yaa dog you see, jess puts his front feet on de Hoboken sho', and he puts his behind feet on de New York sho'."

"Yesser."

"Now s'pose you walk on dis yaa dog's tail in New York."

'Yesser'

'He'll bark won't he?'

'Yesser.'

'Well, where will dat dog bark?'

'In Hoboken, I calc'late.'

'Dat am jess it! You walk on de dogs tail in New York, an' he bark in Hoboken; an' dat's de way de telegraf works!'

'Yesser; dasso—dasso! You'se right, by golley.'

REMARK of His Honor to somebody who applauded in a Griffin, Ga., court; "Now, dry up! I will let you know that this isn't a camp, meeting." The offender immediately became as dry as a bone.

WHEN the jury returned a verdict that John Jackson, of Green Bay, was guilty of burglarly, Mr. Jackson rose up and said; "I'll bet a hundred dollars I ain't?"

A Good Joke.

The Hartford Times mentions the following amusing incident as occurring at the postoffice in that town.

"Louder!"—A colored man lately went to the portoffice, and putting his nose close up to the delivery box, cried out "Louder!" The clerk, supposing the negro to be deaf, and that he was making a request for him to speak louder, so that he could hear, asked him, in a very loud tone, the name of the person for whom he wanted the letter.

"Louder!" cried the negro.

"What name?" yelled the clerk.

"Louder!" again bawled the negro who now supposed the clerk to be deaf.

The clerk took a long breath, and with all his might again bellowed out in the negro's face the same question—"What name?" This done in so loud a tone that the echo seemed to return from the far off hills.

The negro started back in alarm shouting to the very top of his big lungs, "Louder, sir, Louder! I told you Louder! my name is nothing else!"

"Oh, ah! oh, ah!" said the clerk "your name is Londer, eh? Didn't think of that—here's your letter Mr. Louder, here's your letter!"

LESSON OF THE ANTS.

I watched the busy ants one day
Carry loads of soil,
Yet though I stood and watched away,
They did not lag their toil.

At this I mused, and thought how queer
So small and weak as they,
Could not but have some frightful tear,
Of me, who could them slay.

While thus I mused the crowd grew more,
And sometimes I could see
A stone pushed off by three or four,
Which in their way would be.

I struck my stick upon one stone,
And rolled it back again,
To see if they might let alone
The cause of so much sin.

O, no! O, no! a dozen now
This time the stone attacked,
And while I watched I made a vow
I would not roll it back.

For this a moral showed to me,
While journeying through life,
If like the ants we'd only be,
And push with all our might,

And when misfortune throws us back,
Let us still more prevail,
Be like the ants who never lack,
And know no word like fail.

MORAL AND RELIGIOUS.

THE LOVE OF THE SPIRIT.—What an invisible friend is the invisible Spirit! Could we see and know what and how much he is doing for us; could we be conscious of all his ministrations of mercy from the cradle to the grave, then we might have some clearer conceptions of his love.—He is seeking to rescue—Satan is striving to ruin us. He would lead us up to heaven—Satan down to hell. Think of it, sinner! That invissible friend following you from day to day, and striving to keep you from evil, and evil company, and evil thoughts, and wicked ways; striving to bring you to repentance—to love God, his word, his worship, his day, his service, his people, holiness and heaven. Think of it, young friend! Invisible love, standing by your side and whispering in your ear: 'Enter the straight and narrow way. This leads to life. This is the way, walk ye in it.'

O could your vision follow him, could you know how and when and where, and realize how often and how long that blessed Spirit waits upon and waits for you through the medium of sermons, Sabbaths,, sanctuaries; through providences pleasing and painful, through warnings and wooings, in this way and in that; could you know how much the Holy Spirit is doing for your poor soul, and how much he is willing and wait- to do, then might you understand the love of the Spirit.

Even now he is saying: To-day, if ye will hear my voice, harden not your hearts. Now is the accepted time, and the day of salvation. By the love of the Spirit, let me beseech you not to quench the Spirit.

HUMAN WEAKNESS MIGHTY THROUGH GOD.—Nothing is more remarkable in the Bible than to see how God, as if to teach us to trust in nothing and none but himself, selects means that seem the worst fitted to accomplish his end. Does he choose an ambassador to Pharaoh? It is a man of a stammering tongue. Are the streams of Jerico to be sweetened? Salt is cast into the spring. Are the eyes of the blind to be opened? They are rubbed with clay. Are the battlements of a city to be thrown down? The means employed is not the blast of a mine, but the breath of an empty trumpet. Is a rock to be riven? The lightning is left to sleep above and the earthquake with its throes to sleep below, and the instrument is one, a rod, much more likely to be shivered on a rock than to shiver it. Is the world to be converted by preaching, and won from sensual delights to a faith whose symbol is a cross, and whose crown is to be [illegible] among the fires of martyrdom? Leaving schools, and halls and colleges, God summons his preachers from the shores of Galilee. The helm of the Church is entrusted to hands that never steered aught but a fishing-boat; and by the mouth of one who had been its bloodiest persecutor, Christ pleads his cause before the philosophers at Athens and in palaces of Rome. And when he chose the weak things of the world to confound the strong, and the foolish to confound the wisc, what God meant to teach us was, that we are to look above the instruments to the great hand that moves them; and that whether it was a giant or a devil that was to be conquered, the eyes of the body or of the soul that were to be opened, walls of stone, or what are stronger, walls of ignorance and sin that were to be overthrown, men are but instruments in His hands—the meanest mighty with him, and the mightiest mean without him.

Bellefonte and County.

——Nobody shuts the post office door.

——Half Moon farmers are hauling hay to Philipsburg.

——A sewing machine agent up town says he is very fond of the Weed.

——The Watchman "local" wants us to write a jest book and we think we'll jest do it.

——John C. Henry has a very funny local article about "Slauson" in the last Watchman.

——Any of our subscribers who contemplate moving should not fail to inform us of the fact.

——Our presses are fairly musical with work and are turning out the finest specimens of job work.

——Our borough has been unusually lively and crowded this week and merchants are doing well.

——If the election yesterday passed off as quietly in Philadelphia as it did here, the Quaker City has performed a miracle.

——Who can furnish us with numbers 15 and 19 of volumn 5 of the REPUBLICAN? A fair price will be paid for them.

——Our local editor has been under the weather this week, and therefore we are unable to give our readers the usual variety of local matter.

——February came in on Sunday, and goes out on Saturday, making four even weeks in the month, and each day occurs an even number of times. When will it occur again?

——Dr. Belford, can be found at his office, over Rankin & Co's Drug Store, during the next four weeks. Persons desiring the services of a first class dentist will do well to call.

——An old lady stopped at Sechler's grocery store on Saturday, before taking the train for Tyrone, and bought two pounds of cheese and a jar of pickles to eat on the journey (as she said), "to keep off the disease."

——The most prompt relief will be obtained from using COSMOLINE in cases of sore throat and swelling of the glands. It is superior to anything ever used for this purpose. It will also cure a stiff neck very quickly.

——The Watchman local says in his last paper that, after reading an item in the REPUBLICAN, "a heavenly smile flitted over his seraphic countenance." We have seen those smiles, they looked like a valentine we received on Saturday.

——Gen. James S. Brisbin, of the U. S. Army, a son-in-law of Mr. D. M. Wagner, arrived in this place on Monday. The General has been serving his country in Nebraska for some time back, but as we have not had the pleasure of meeting him, up to this writing, we are not informed of his future movements.

——Elders School No. 1 Half Moon, reports for month ending Feb. 6th, 80 per cent. Of forty pupils in attendance, Mary Wilson, Agnes Gray, Emma Harnden. Anna Gray, Carrie Hunter, Benner Wilson (not our Major,) Wallace Hunter, Harry L. Wilson, John Wilson, E. C. Elder, G. F. McDivitt and J. F. Bartholmew were persent every day.

——If the people who empty their ash pans into Spring creek, from the bridge adjoining our office door, thereby covering pavement and people and blinding passers-by we will retaliate.—How would they like to have us empty our ash pans and waste baskets on their front door steps? If they don't quit it, our devil will be to pay for a case of reciprocity.

NEARLY SUFFICATED.—One night last week Miss Justie Hoy, who lives a short distance below town—and her cousin, Miss Smeltzer, were almost sufficted in their bedroom by the escape of gas from the heater below. They did not make their appearance at breakfast in the morning and some time after nine o'clock the alarmed family forced an entrance into room and found them both in a most dangerous condition. Pure air and the proper restoratives soon relieved them but it was thought an hour or two longer in the room would have been fatal.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY.—Centre County boasts three Granges. Potter, Benner and Spring townships have been initiated. Potter is the bell sheep, having lead off in the movement. On last Thursday Spring township went into the business. Frank Porter, the special Deputy of the State, communicated the grips and pass words and installed the following officers:

Master	Richard Conly
Overseer	Joseph W. Marshall
Lecturer	J. P. selbert
Steward	David Lohr
Assistant	Uriah Stover
Chaplain	George Johnsonbach
Treasurer	Robert Henderson
Secretary	B. F. Hunter
Gate Keeper	J. A. Henderson

The classical impersonations are:—Ceres, Miss Mary E. Hughes; Pomona, Miss Belle Hunter: Flora, Miss Jane W. Shivery; Lady Assistant Steward, Miss Martha Henderson.

On Friday afternoon (13th) a grange was organized in Spring twp. by Dept. Porter, assisted by several members of Centre Hall and Benner granges, and the following officers were elected and installed:

Master	P. M. Weaver
Overseer	W. T. Tibbins
Lecturer	P. S. Dale
Steward	J. S. Musser
Assistant	Joseph Ross
Chaplain	D. K. Hoover
Treasurer	W. J. Dale
Secretary	C. Dale, Jr
Gate Keeper	Henry Smith
Ceres	Mary M. Dale
Pomona	Jane C. Rothrock
Lady Assistant Steward	Martha J. Barnhart

We had the pleasure of a call from Mr. Frank Porter of Lycoming Co., who gave us the above bit of information. Mr. P. is a perfect granger, a thrifty looking farmer with the hay seeds in his hair, which however is not of the carroty kind. He gave us a kind of a resume of the objects of granges in this section, and from what he says we are led to believe that they are a good thing in the family of a farmer. He says the object is mutual instruction and protection, to lighten labor and improve the quality of live stock and vegetables, to expand the mind and chest. Unity of action cannot be acquired, he says without discipline, and discipline cannot be enforced without significant organization. hence their ceremony of initiation binds them together as bundles of wheat bound in morocco; but although so powerful, its application is as gentle as that of silken thread that binds a wreath of flowers. Success, in all seriousness however, to the Patrons of Husbandry.

——The Bellefonte Foundry has again resumed operation with a full force of workmen and with plenty of paying orders. We looked in upon them on Saturday and found everything busy with the hum of business. The proprietor, Mr. Wm. P. Duncan, informed us that the prospects were most favorable for a good trade during the coming season.—We noticed quite a number of Houston water wheels laying around, and upon inquiry found that the trade Mr. Duncan has worked up in these wheels is quite surprising. Parties who need water wheels will certainly consult their own interests in purchasing this wheel, as all competent judges every place where its merits are known, have acknowledged its superiority. In all public tests it has always given a higher percentage than any wheel tested, and although, new to the market, is considered the leading wheel now in use.

——James H. Lipton, Esq., late Prothonetary of this county, is something of a wag. He happened to meet, on the B. E. V. train week before last, the man who was sent here to put twenty thousand salmon into Spring Creek, and on the way down, informed the fish propagator that the Bald Eagle was Spring Creek. Accordingly he unloaded his stock at Milesburg and sent the fish afloat in the wrong stream. Our informant says that these are the facts, and if they are, it is a good joke on either Mr. Lipton or the patrons of Spring Creek. Anyhow it shows that the fish distributor is so easily taken in, that he must be something of a sucker himself.

——The new store of James Welch & Co. is fast approaching completion. Crowds of people visit it every day to see the immense windows which cost in Philadelphia one hundred and twenty-five dollars a light. That this book store will be the very best in this city is apparent to the most careless observer of passing events. A beautiful store and the largest and best selected stock of books, toys and fancy articles to be found any where except in Boston, New York or Philadelphia, in fact James Welch & Co. have the great book and toy emporium of Central Pennsylvania.

——On Sunday, February 1st, Mr. John Miller and wife, of Greenmont, Adams county, started in a buggy to visit the parents of Mr. Miller. The parents resided in Mount Joy township, about four miles from Mr. Miller's home. The couple had with them a babe of three months, and what was their surprise and horror to find, when they reached their parents, that the little infant was in a dying condition. In less than an hour, the child was dead. It is supposed the child was overcome by the excessive cold of the day named. A similar case occurred in the State of New York.—Raftsman's Journal.

——The O. U. A. M. parade, dinner and lecture will come off on Friday next.

——Why is Brown's Republican like a soap bubble? Because it is sure to burst.

——One of the county officials was insulted last week by an organ grinder. The police should look out for such chaps.

——D. F. Fortney, Esq., yesterday aspired to the dignity of borough father. He ought to get married and try fathering a family.

——A great revival still continues in the Philipsburg M. E. Church. Ninety-two souls have been converted. God speed the good work.

——Horses and cattle wanted in exchange for pianos and organs. For further particulars, address W. C. Bunnel, Lewistown, Pa. 7-2t.

FOR RENT.—A pleasant house of six rooms, situate in Colesville, near Bellefonte. House newly painted and in good order. Rent reasonable and taxes paid by owner. Apply to 7—3t. DANIEL RHOADS, Bellefonte.

——Messrs. C. Munson, D. W Holt and Dr. G. F. Hoop, of Philipsburg, have purchased the Kepler property of that place and will erect a handsome block and hotel stand thereon during the coming summer.

——By reference to the Auditors' Report it will be seen that Miles township, through the collector, Henry Wolf, has paid off all her taxes. This is perhaps the only township in the county that does not stand indebted to the county, and as Samuel Gramly, our Republican Commissioner, comes from Miles, it may be taken as another argument in favor of his ability and energy.

——A little paper published at Mount Union called the Mount Union Times is responsible for the following:

> The most enterprising coroner lives in Centre county. A cow was killed up there the other day, and in her stomach were found two hair pins. No other trace of the milkmand were discovered; but the coroner not to be swindled out of a fee, held an inquest on the two hair pins, and returned a verdict "in accordance with the facts."

We would like to know if any man in this county ever heard of this before.

——The "local" of this paper was absent from town week before last, and substitutes supplied the local matter; but on the return of the above indidividual he found that he had received credit in full for what others had written, by the "Watchman" local. It didn't amount to much, however, but still it may be regarded as something of a joke to be blackguarded on somebody's else's account.

——Report of school No. 7, Boggs District for the month ending Feb. 7th: No. of males in attendance during the month, 11; No. of females, 10—total, 21; average of males 10, females 10; total average, 20; per cent. of attendance of males, 91, females, 100—total percentage, 95; per cent of attendance during the term till date, males 76, fe. 78—total 77.

J. C. THOMPSON, Teacher.

——The champions of the light weight and heavy weights were after the office of Assistant Burgess yesterday. When it was found that uncle David Johnson wouldn't run, they narrowed the contest down, on the Republican side, to N. Beck and Esquire Klinger. The Squire was found to weigh a few more pounds than Beck, but, as the latter was increasing in avoirdupois so rapidly, it was estimated that he would outweigh anybody in the town before entering upon his juducial duties, and he was accordingly placed in nomination. Esquire Gephart, the champion of the light weight, had no rival on the Democratic side, and received his party vote, which was light.

PROF CLARY'S CONCERT.—Prof. Clary and his wife, assisted by the leading musical talent of Bellefonte, gave a concert in Reynolds' Hall on Friday evening last. The curtain rose before a pretty good house, considering that a heavy rain was pouring down all the evening. Perhaps our soul is not possessed of a sufficient amount of music to make us competent judges, but our ear was never so much tickled by sweet sounds before. The celebrated Hayes Quartette was a horse-fiddle in comparison. Dr. Harris and E. M. Blanchard sang several duets that were remarkable for difficult composition as well as for the ease and grace with which they were rendered. The singing of Miss Maggie Swope was highly complimented by all. She possesses a rare voice and faultless enunciation which never fail to please.—Prof. Clary fiddled right pleasantly, and his wife sang a couple of songs in rather good style. Mrs. J. P. Hughes presided at the piano, and Messrs. Wm Montgomery and C. E. Anderson mingled their voices with the choruses. It was a very good entertainment.

——Business in Bellefonte is brightening up as spring approaches. On Saturday last we were invited by Maj. McClellan to witness the first operation in casting at the foundry of the Car Shops. The Car company is not quite ready for orders yet, and we have no doubt when they are ready they will get plenty of orders.

BOALSBURG ITEMS.—Our town was enlivened for the last few days by the good sleighing we have been having, which has set every body in motion who has been lucky enough to have a horse and sleigh at his disposal ..... The Methodist congregation is holding a protracted meeting in their church at this place.....Our good looking friend Dr. H H. Muthersbaugh has returned from Philadelphia, where he has been attending medical lectures since Sept. last. We suppose our young ladies will rejoice at the Doctors return, as he keeps a good team, and sleigh, and delights in taking the fair ones out sleigh riding.

Some of our citizens have been on a prospecting tour to the South, they penetrated the State Confedracy as far as Elizabeth City, North Corolina, they represent things quiet and and in a tolerably prosperous condition, but still, great room for improvement; lack of energy and enterprise appear to be the main cause of their unprosperous condition, capital is also much needed to develope the a dvantages of the Southern country. The farmers there are now busy planting potatoes, and sewing oats, and the weather was quite Spring like when our friends left. The prospect of a speedy resumption of work on the L. C. & Spruce Creek Rail Road, is creating some excitement in this and Ferguson Townships, We stated last week that the difference in the cost of construction in favor of the Shugerts Farm route over the Lemont route was $17,000, should have been $68,000.

——Our mountain cotemporary has the following: Along the line of the Bald Eagle Valley Railroad are several stations taking their names from furnaces in full blast thirty years ago, but now only monuments of a decayed industry. The furnaces were all christened with the name of a lady, thus we have Hannah Furnace, Martha Furnace, Julianna Furnace, named after the three daughters of the man that built them. In speaking of these places those familiar with them often omit the word Furnace altogether, and in the case of the place last named the Julianna is abbreviated to Julian. It no doubt seems a little odd to strangers pessing over the road to hear the brakesman, as he opens the door, bawl out "Martha," "Hannah," "Julian." While one of our citizens was taking a trip up the valley he observed two young men, genteelly dressed but evidently laboring under a moderate load of Local Option, and therefore presumably just from Lock Haven, the paradise of guzzlers. As the train stopped at Julian nobody got out of the car, and the brakeman forgot to shout out the name, but just as two young ladies entered the door at the opposite end of the car he thrust in his head and announced "Julian!" One of the young men who had passed through Lock Haven, arose, and greeted the foremost young lady with:—"How do you do, Miss Julian, I am happy to see you looking so well; I had not expected to meet you!" The astonished young lady was nonplussed and blushed painfully, while our friend arose from his seat and explained, the young man made his apology, and the train sped on to "Martha."

——Our old friend Geo. K. Tozer, the well known Lock Haven druggist, has been arrested to answer the charge of poisoning the wife of Mr. J. C. Bower of that place. The Republican speaks of the affair as follows:

> George K. Tozer, druggist, and Lewis Buruby, a clerk in his employ, were on last Thursday arrested by Officer Westbroak, on a charge preferr d before Alderman Nobis by John J. Eckert, of carelessly causing the death of Mrs. J. C. Brown, who died very suddenly about three weeks ago, after taking medicine from a prescription prepared at Tozer's store under the direction of Dr. Walls. Tozer and Buruby waived examination, and gave bail in $1,500, with Lewis Ceupie, Wheeler Shaw and M. Towns as sureties, for their appearance at Court. Mr. Eckert, who preferred the complaint, was a brother-in-law of Mrs. Brown.
> In advance of any judical action in this case it would be unfair to state anything more than the result of the chemical analysis of the medicine said to have contained the poison. A bottle containing a portion of it was sent to Prof. Rogers of Pennsylvania University, and he last week returned a statement that he had discovered evidences of strychnine. Another bottle was sent by Mr. Tozer to Prof. Reese, the chemist who overturned the evidence of the pretended discoveries of the poison in the Schoeppe and Wharton cases, and has reported that no evidence of poison exists. Various rumors are afloat which it would be impossible to set at rest through any information that we have yet been able to obtain. The matter seems to be complicated from the fact that one of the ingredients of which the medicine was compounded was obtained at another drug store. Mr. Tozer has for years been accounted one of the most skillful as well as careful druggist, and nobody who knows him will believe in advance of a searching trial that the charge of negligence or carelessness can be laid to him. However, we hope, for his sake and the interests of all concerned, that the investigation will be as thorough as possible, and this we understand to be most earnestly desired by Mr. Tozer.

CHURCH DEDICATION.—The New Chapel of Messiah's Church at Dicks Run was dedicated to the worship of Almighty God, on the morning of Sunday the first day of February A. D. 1874. Rev. W. H. Swartz of Harrisburg, Pa., delivered a very able discourse on Hag. 2: 9; and offered the dedicatory prayer. A financial statement was then made by the pastor in charge. Nearly five hundred dollaas were paid and pledged to meet the demand made to finish the building. Our friends who so liberally aided us have our thanks. Hoping that Eternal Life will be their portion, through faith in the only "name given under heaven among men whereby we can be saved." THE PASTER.

MORE RAPID WORK.—The Black Moshannon water mill of E. M. Sturdevant cut 800,005 18-inch shingles, on two Parker machines, in twenty-seven days, taking the shingles out of the log. The work was done by three Cole boys and D. C. Dunlap; who are anxious to wager from $1.00 to $500 that they can cut 200,000 18-inch shingles in eleven hours.—Philipsburg Journal.

PERSONALS.—A. Schnell late of Peru, returned to his family. He has been teaching the South Americans how to bore for oil.

—S. H. Yocum, of Bush & Yocum's law firm is in Los Angelos County, California, and is rapidly regaining his health.

——An Irishman by the name of Patrick Long, familiarly known as "Paddy, the Pusher," was found drowned in the Moshannon creek, underneath the bridge between Oscola and the railroad passenger depot, at eleven o'clock on last Friday forenoon. As he was addicted to drinking, it is supposed he fell from the bridge while under the influence of liquor, and being stunned he met his fate. His body was drawn out upon the bank at the edge of the water and laid there whilst intelligent people rushed about discussing whether an inquest should be held over him as he lay, or whether he ought to be removed to some house first, or as he was found in the middle of the creek, whether the job belonged to Clearfield or Centre county, the creek being the line.

——A correspondent from Eagleville requests us to publish the following suggestions to persons wishing to start a church, and, as they are rather pertinent, our readers may find something valuable in them:

First—Hire a pastor, not one that looks down-hearted, but one that feels his oats—too proud to associate with a shoemaker for fear he will be contaminated by the touch of sole leather; one that never visits his members except when he wants something; one that flatters the women; one that will sit and fan them when sick; one that will leave his wife to walk from the cars alone—while he goes home with one of the virgins of his flock; one that will not consult the deacons; one that turns covenant meetings into riots; one that shows around private letters; one that returns evil for good; one that holds meeting in his house and not in the church on appointed days, and last of all, one that will not do everything for the building up of the church.

A church that follows the above advice will not be totally different from a certain one in this vicinity. SATOR.

——We wouldn't give a fig for a man who has no enemies. Such a man is a mere non-entity, a milk sop, without pluck or stamina; without vital forces morally, mentally or physically, sufficient to give him courage requisite to speak his mind, and to act right regardless of consequences. His only boast is that he does no harm; but does he do any good in his day and generation? Your man of force pushes obstacles out of his way and does not wait for Providence to work a miracle in his behalf. In his active rush through life he is certain to collide with the idlers and loiterers on the wayside, and these, too lazy to imitate his industry and follow his example, get hurt, become envious of his success and are consequently his enemies. He has indeed bitter foes, but then he has firm friends, who admire, support, sustain him in his battles for the good and the right. Such a man is honored in life, and when he departs to his rest, men preserve for him a green spot in their memory.—Ex.

DEATH OF EDDIE HARPER.—On Monday morning of last week the oldest son of Mr. Jared Harper, aged thirteen years, was called from earth. About a year ago he was thrown from a horse and had his arm broken and sustained other injuries from which he never recovered. We remember him as a bright, sunny faced, little school-boy, possessed of a bright mind and a mild and winning disposition. It is a sad, hard duty to give back to the Lord, one so young, so promising and possessed of so many good qualities of mind and heart as was the deceased, but an All-wise Providence willed it and the jewel of the household has been called from the bosom of a loving family and nothing but a Savior's love is left to comfort them. We mourn, with them, their loss although we know that human sympathy cannot alleviate human sorrow.

——THE ELECTION yesterday was a harmonious, dull affair and although it was conducted with the new Constitution in force, there wasn't so very much difference in the modus operandi. The patriarchal Esquire Irwin was made Chief Burgess again, with the aldermanic Nathaniel Beck as his assistant. James Harris of hardware fame is again Borough treasurer F. Potts Green was elected assessor with Harry Pontius and James Sommerville for assistants. Isaac Lose is the borough constable and Charles Garner (colored) has been elevated to the dizzy hights of hog constable. Isaac Mitchell was re-elected borough auditor. The election of ward officers resulted as follows.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

We noticed in one of our exchanges this week the statement of Drs. John Hodgkins, of South Jefferson, Me., whose son was cured of incipient consumption by the use of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. We refer to this at this time as tending to corroborate the statement we made last week in relation to this Liniment as applied to consumption.

If Congress has employed as much scientific skill in the arrangement of its "Reconstruction Policy" at the close, as the War Department did in the beginning of the war, in arranging for the manufacture of what was called Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders for the use of the Calvery horses, no doubt the Union would have been restored long ago.—Exchange.

A True Balsam.—Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is truly a Balsam. It contains the balsamic principle of the Wild Cherry, the balsamic properties of tar and of pine. Its ingredients are all balsamic. Coughs, Colds, Sore Throats, Bronchitis, and Consumption speedily disappear under its balsamic influence.

DYSPEPSIA! DYSPEPSIA! DYSPEPSIA!

Dyspepsia is the most perplexing of all human ailments. Its symptoms are almost infinite in their variety, and the forlorn and despondent victims of the disease often fancy themselves the prey, in turn, of every known malady. This is due, in part, to the close sympathy which exists between the stomach and the brain, and in part also to the fact that any disturbance of the digestive function necessarily disorders the liver, the bowels and the nervous system, and effects, to some extent, the quality of the blood.

E. F. Kunkle's Bitter Wine of Iron a sure cure. This is not a new preparation, to be tried and found wanting; it has been prescribed daily for many years in the practice of eminent physicians with unparalleled success; it is not expected or intended to cure all the diseases to which the human family is subject, but is warranted to cure Dyspepsia in its most obstinate form. Kunkle's Bitter Wine of Iron never fails to cure. Symptoms of Dyspepsia are loss of appetite, wind and rising of the food, dryness of the mouth, heartburn, distension of the stomach and bowels, constipation headache, dizziness, sleeplessness and low spirits. Try the great remedy and be convinced of its merits. Get the genuine. Take only Kunkel's which is put only in $1 bottles. Depot, 229 North Ninth Street Philadelphia.

Centaur Liniment

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., &c., upon the human frame, and of strains spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. They are counter-irritant, all-healing, pain reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are endered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. The recipe is published around each bottle. They sell as no articles ever before sold, and they sell because they do just what they pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it.
